He Was One of the Greatest Scientists of the Mineteenth Century. At the age of seventy-three, full of honors, and holding a world-wide rep-utation, Hermann von Helmholtz died recently at Berlin, and the world of science and the world of letters are poorer for his loss. How great that loss is can never be known; but this can be safely stated, that had the ben-efits he has bequeathed to suffering hu-manity by the invention of that marvelous instrument, the ophthalmoscope, stood alone, his name would have deservedly been handed down to posterity as one of the most distinguished scientists of his day. By the use of this instrument oculists are enabled to obtain a view of the living human retina. In 1831 he wrote a pamphlet describing this instrument. Born in the middle classhis father was a professor at Potsdam —Helmholtz was educated in his native town, and then went to Berlin to undergo the ordinary medical curriculum of the military institute, and there qualified for the position of military surgeon at Potsdam. From that time his success was beyond question. In 1849 he was appointed professor of physiology at Konigasergi in 1853 he resigned that for a similar position at Bonn, and in 1853 that post was yielded in favor of the professorship of physics in favor of the professorship of physics in the Berlin university in 1871. He was a most voluminous writer. His best known work is "The Sensation of Tone as a Physiological Basis for the Theory of Music," a work which has

It was found that, in spite of the heat of the dis-charge and the violence and briefness of the compact, cultivations of bacteria arose in the gelatine. In other cases the boxes had been wrapped in flannel infected with various bacteria, and uninfected bullets were fired through flannel and gelatine. Growths of bac-teria derived from the infected flannel appeared in the gelatine. Knowledge remarks upon the horrible suggestion conveyed by these experiments.

Remarkable Experience of Rev. W. J. Chapin, of Chatham.

is Interesting Story of His Prostration and Restoration to Health.

(Prom the State Journal, Springfield, Ill.) In the pretty little village of Chatham, Sangamon county, there lives a Bartist divine whose snow white hair is the one outward sign that he has enroached upon the days beyond the allotted three score years and ten. His clear eye, keen mental faculties and magnificent physique all bear witness to a life well and nobly spent.

This pioneer in God's eternal vineyard is Rev. W. J. Chapin, whose 72 years are crowded with noble deeds

The subject of his fine physique was broached by his interviewer and with increasing earnest-ness he said that, in spite of the indi-cations to the contrary, his life had not all been sunshine and good health. "As my present appearance testifies, I was fortunate in the possession of a very vigorous constitution. In earlier years 1 scarcely knew what it meant to be sick, and I was al-most a perfect stranger to any kind of medicine or tonic. As is too often the case, I overestimated my physical resources, and when it was too late iii that I was compelled to stop be-fore my sermon was finished. Mrs. Chapin, a kindly faced elderly lady, was present during the conver-sation and said: "I don't think Mr Chapin could ever have resumed his preaching after he had the attack of is grippe had it not been for the Pink Pills. They did him so much good that I decided to test their efficacy on myself. I have been troubled rears with what our physician, Dr. Hewitt, calls rheumatic paralysis. Electricity gives me relief, but since taking the Pink Pills I have been stronger and the pain in my right arm and hand is less acute. We keep the pills in the house nearly all the time, and they do me a great deal of good in the way of toning up my sys-tem and strengthening me. The pills are used by a good many others in this vicinity and every one speaks well of them. Mrs. Japh Knotts, wife of Supervisor Knotts, was ill for a long time and her friends had all given her case up as hopeless when she began using the pills. It was the first medicine that helped her.
